The 2002-2003 4-H State Ambassador Team and Conference Planning Committee are happy to announce this year's 4-H State Leadership Conference and California 4-H Technology Conference. Delegates may elect to participate in one or both of these leadership experiences. The planning committee is very excited about this year's program, and is confident that you will find this opportunity to be both rewarding and exciting.

California 4-H Technology Conference (CTC) NEW!

The California 4-H Computer Corps invites you to embark upon an exciting journey in technology through participation in the very first California 4-H Technology Conference. This conference will provide delegates with beginning to advanced technology training, introduce delegates to present and future opportunities within the field of technology, and assist delegates in the implementation of technology teams within their own communities. Take advantage of this exceptional opportunity to develop your personal technological skills, participate in an enriching and enjoyable state conference, meet other 4-Hers from around the state, represent your county, and implement what you learn in your own community. Come join us, the California 4-H Computer Corps at the very first California 4-H Technology Conference! We hope to see you there.

Youth Leadership Conference

The mission of the 4-H State Leadership Conference is to provide youth with leadership and service skills, peer and adult networks, encouragement and opportunities necessary to improve their well-being, their family and their community. The conference is an opportunity for groups of youth to learn new skills, network statewide, and learn about other opportunities for involvement. The State Leadership Conference will provide high school aged youth with five hands-on educational workshops. Youth, adults, faculty and community members will offer workshops to stimulate your mind and inspire you to try new and innovative programs. Conference highlights include: Motivational assembly speakers, swimming, volleyball, bowling, video games and dance.

For a complete packet, call Scott Parker at 858-495-5190 or go to:<http://fourh.ucdavis.edu/conference/slc/index.asp> Application deadline - June, 23, 2003.

Local Garden Project Wins State Award

Rancho Poway's Gardening Project recently completed their Community Service Garden at Villa Monte Vista Convalescent Home in Poway. Over a 3-month period, the members graphed out plans for a 25 foot section of planter beds, shopped for the plants and then took them to the convalescent home. Together with some of the residents, they fertilized the soil and planted roses, flowers, strawberries, tomatoes and herbs.

Victoria Torrescano, Paula Lycan, Michelle Byrne and Justina Byrne chose plants they thought the residents would enjoy harvesting, using in the kitchen and watching grow.

Each member then wrote about their experience, what they learned and how it made them feel. They put the writings, the planter drawings, before and after pictures, and an application together and entered the "Way to Grow!" Youth Gardens Recognition Program. On May 16, at a ceremony at Sea World, they were named a "California Youth Garden of the Year," which went to the top 4 entrants in the State out of about 6,000 youth! Congratulations and Way to Grow!

Volunteer of the Year

The UC Cooperative Extension would like to congratulate Debbie McAdams on being the Department's Volunteer of The Year for 2003. She received her award April 30 at the Annual Volunteer Recognition Program, hosted by the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors.

For 25 years Debbie has provided the San Diego County 4-H Program with countless hours of service, actively participating and contributing to all aspects of the program. She serves both youth and adult members as a leader, mentor and advisor.

Debbie served several years as the Community Club Leader for the Jamul Chaparros, as well as their Swine Project Leader.

Debbie also developed and implemented the 4-H After School Program at Oak Grove Middle School in Jamul.

Debbie has served in numerous positions in the County 4-H Leaders Council. These included County Emerald Star Coordinator, Volunteer Orientation Master Trainer, All Star Advisor, Teen Council Advisor and Record Book Evaluation Chair. Debbie is currently chair of the Countywide Animal Science Program Committee.

Debbie has volunteered to serve as a trainer and educator for the Kaufman Foundations Mini-Society, an entrepreneurial curriculum and the Animal Ambassador Project, an animal environmental curriculum from the UC School of Veterinary Medicine, for children in out of school programs. In addition to the time she gives to the 4-H Program, Debbie volunteers her time to the Family Nutrition Program and the Youth Education Foundation, two additional programs under the UC Cooperative Extension umbrella.

Home Arts Festival Winners

The county Home Arts Learning Day was held on April 28th. Members participated in a variety of activities including the Fashion Review, Clothing Construction Judging, Favorite Foods Show, Talent Show, project displays and a community service project. The theme for the day was Home Arts Festival. Approximately 40 members participated in the day. Members and leaders made centerpieces for a nursing home for May Day, as a community service project. The Home Arts Advisory Committee planned and organized the event. A special thanks goes to Donna Dickman and Jenne Hill for their hard work in making this day such a great success. It is hoped that this event will help promote greater participation in the home arts projects. Congratulations to all the 4-H members who participated in this event.

Record Book Evaluation Dates Set

Record Books of members' 4-H projects and achievements are due, as a club group, in the 4-H Office on August 1, 2003 by 5:00 p.m. Check with your Community Club or Unit Leader.

On Wednesday and Thursday, August 13 and 14, the Record Books will be categorized from 12:00-7:00 p.m. Contact Debbie McAdams at 619-669-1954 if you can help.

Record Books evaluations will take place on August 14 and in the evenings on August 15 and 16 at the 4-H Office. Adult and teen evaluators are needed. This is a good way to get involved and learn about record books to help your members. Each club who submits record books is required to also provide evaluators. Lunches will be provided by San Diego Leaders Council. Contact your Community Club Leader if you can help.

2003 California 4-H Leaders' Forum

Applications are now available for the 2003 California 4-H Leaders' Forum in Asilomar. This year's conference, "Change the World," is scheduled for November 7 - 9, 2003 and will provide adult 4-H volunteers with an opportunity to engage in hands on learning experiences, while further developing leadership and project skills. Historically, the San Diego County Leaders' Council has provided registration assistance for first time attendees. For more information or for an application packet please contact the County 4-H Office at (858) 694-2861.

Volunteers Needed at the San Diego County Fair

The San Diego County 4-H Leaders Council is looking for volunteers to help with the coordination and staffing of the San Diego County 4-H Information booth at the Del Mar Fair.

Interested individuals will receive free admission to the Fair for the day that they are assisting. For more information or to volunteer for this activity please contact Scott Parker at 858-495-5190.

State 4-H Incentives and Recognition Committee

Congratulations!! Alicia Hill was selected to serve on the State 4-H Incentives and Recognition Committee. Half of the committee will serve two years and the other half will serve either one or three years. The first meeting will be held at UC Davis.

4-H Shooting Sports Program- Archery

Archery continues to be an important part of the 4-H movement in many parts of the country. At this time, Fallbrook 4-H seems to have the only active program in San Diego County. Roger and Jean Combs of Fallbrook have recently been certified as California 4-H Archery Instructors. The next step is to offer other adult 4-H leaders the same opportunity.

Archery teaches mental and physical discipline, hand/eye coordination and member responsibility for 4-H members, as well as adults later in life.

The Combs' are offering to teach future archery instructors that they may offer the skill to their 4-H clubs.

The time and place is yet to be determined, but most likely will be late July or early August, before the start of the new 4-H year and probably at the Combs' Fallbrook home. There will be a nominal charge of $20 per attendee plus the cost of nearby food and lodging (if necessary) for the two-day session.

Potential archery leaders are welcome to bring their own archery equipment, but basic archery equipment will be available at the site.

It is anticipated that the adult student group will be from four to a maximum of 12. Adult leaders from San Diego, Riverside and Imperial counties are welcome. If the number of interested people exceeds a comfortable number, the training can be offered at additional times and locations.

If interested, please contact Scott Parker at the San Diego County 4-H office, 619-495-5190, saparker@ucdavis.edu or Roger & Jean Combs, 760-728-7877, combscom@tfb.com. We will evaluate the number and needs of the tentative group of attendees, firm up a time and location, and provide additional details of the archery program training.

Animal Science Proficiency Committee

The Animal Science Proficiency (ASP) Committee meeting was held on May 8th at the County 4H Office. The ASP committee addressed the issues of training new and returning leaders and ways of providing high quality accurate information to leaders and members.

The decision was made to create a list of approved web sites/ books. The list would be maintained on the San Diego County 4H Web Site. To aid in the creation of the lists there will be a yearly contest held beginning in May and ending on August 31. The contest is open to all 4H leaders and members. There are three divisions: adult, member and primary. We encourage all to enter.

A committee will be formed to select the best sites and books. Entries will be evaluated on the basis of:

1. High quality accurate information
2. Kid and adult friendly
3. The most information
4. Interest

The evaluation committee will be comprised of adult leaders and members. You are encouraged to submit as many high quality sites as you wish, but remember that we are looking for quality and accuracy.

If you wish to participate in the contest you can drop a copy of the home page off at the office, faxes and mailing/email are suggested. You can also use a disk to submit multiple copies of home pages if you wish. All who participate will receive a certificate and the entries that are selected as the top 3 sites in each category will receive an award (to be determined later).

If you need more information about the contest or participating on the ASP committee please contact Scott Parker at the 4H office or Debbie McAdams (619) 669-1954.

Spotlight on Education Competition and Cooperation At The Fair

Competition and cooperation are part of youth's everyday experiences. Often it is the actions and attitudes of the significant adults in the child's life, that determine a child's positive or negative reaction to competition. It is vital that a child develop a positive attitude about competition since it will be an important part of his or her adult life. Understanding the child's perspective and the adult's role is the first step toward creating a healthy environment in which that positive attitude about competition can be developed.

This time of year in the 4-H Program, children may be thrust into more public competitive situations than other times of the year. It is important that everyone develop and promote an attitude that nurtures the young person and assists them in growing positively from those experiences.

In 4-H, a child's performance is publicly demonstrated, tested and evaluated in the show ring or other competitive events. This can prove more important and more visible than classroom performance to children. An increase in anxiety often occurs. Youth Sports Institute surveyed youth 10 to 18 in 1988 and found that 3 of the top 10 reasons for dropping out of a youth activity or sport program are:

- It was no longer fun.
- There was too much pressure
- There was too much emphasis on winning

In another survey youth ranked "to have fun" as the Number 1 reason to take part in a youth program or sports activity and "to win" was ranked 12th. Children, and a large portion of society in general, equate success with winning and failure with losing.

Winning in and of itself is a failure-oriented goal that many of the participants will not achieve. If winning depends on placing higher than the opponents, then many participants will not learn to win. If winning depends on attaining or exceeding personal performance and striving for excellence, then everyone has the opportunity to win. You can strengthen the concept of everyone potentially winning by offering many opportunities for youth to attain personal goals throughout the project experience, not just in the show ring at the fair.

Focusing on the improvement of a skill is a success-oriented goal that helps a child feel good about him or herself – regardless of the placing. Also, skills or success-oriented goals learned and demonstrated throughout the year allow youth to be recognized for their achievement many times, instead of just once a year. The more this happens, the less stressful that competitive event becomes for the youth.

Many children do not like competition. They just want to participate, belong, and have fun with other youth and adults. Group activities and cooperative ventures can have just as positive effects for youth as competition. For young children, positive participation is more important than winning in competitive events.

Unfortunately, youth in fair related competitive events may be combined together across a broad age range. Within that broad age range there are several specific age groups that have a different focus and needs in competitive activities. For 9 to 12 year olds fun is the goal of involvement.

Every child and youth has a different motivation for participation in competitive activities. It might be to be involved in an activity with friends; it might be to please their parent or it might be to look for some type of recognition. Striking a healthy balance means adults need to take the time to understand the child's motivation and provide support rather than push their own values and expectations without consideration of the child or youth. Everyone needs to make sure there is a healthy and supportive environment for competition to be a positive experience.

If children have fun in the competitive activity they can still feel they came out a winner even if they do not place high in the ring or competition. The reverse is also true. If the overall experience is not fun then winning a blue ribbon may mean nothing to them.

For young members belonging to the project group is the most important aspect. Therefore, creating opportunities for them to do fun or challenging things as a part of the club or project group can be more important than actually going out into the ring as a competitor. Give members this age a chance to help and be involved in the decisions regarding group assignments and displays.

Losing is never as joyful as winning. However, a true loser is one who yells, cheats, argues, sulks and refuses to think, "How can I do better next time." How adults respond and follow up in this situation is very important. Sarcasm and teasing is never appropriate. Young people can have difficulty sorting out what is meant by teasing and what is a direct attack on them.

Some adults try to soften the blow of not placing and make excuses such as, "It was just a bad day," or "You did well; they just did not see you." They may even go so far as to blame someone else and deny what actually happened. This can be confusing to the young person.

Avoid denial and excuses to "soften the blow." Try a hug, a smile and recognition of the youth's effort. Try, "I can see that you tried your best, and I am proud of you" or "I know you will do better next time." Loss or failure should be viewed as unavoidable and as a learning experience. The young person may be viewing the loss or failure as letting you down or as proof that he or she will never succeed. Appropriate questions can be asked to avoid negative reactions and help guide the youth toward positive growth. Successful people try to evaluate the outcome, rather than focus on the win or loss. It is important that every child have the opportunity to reflect and process what happened. Ask the young person: "How do you feel you did?" "What Happened? What caused this to happen?" "What can you do differently next time?" Follow these questions with more encouragement to try again.

It is important that every child has an opportunity to process with someone about what happened, with the placing or evaluation of their exhibit. It can be a 4-H leader, parent, or teen leader. Few judges have the time or opportunity to process with each child why the child was given a particular placing or ribbon.

The philosophy of child first, winning second is easy for most adults to endorse, but it is often difficult to practice in the heat of a competitive contest; and it is true children learn by watching what adults do as well as from what adults say.

It is important that parents act as observers and supporters of their children, but never pushers or avengers! Don't be a ringside coach. Every year I see some parent distracting their child by trying to tell them what to do. At this point you need to let them make their own decisions. Parents and other adults need to model self control.

Suggestions for parents:

- Use a positive approach. Praise for the positive aspects of what someone does throughout the duration of the event or fair, not just the competitive part.
- Focus on the developing skills and not the end result.
- Check your personal expectations at the door. Help your child set realistic expectations and support them.
- When possible, participate, contribute or assist with all the activities your child is involved in during the fair or other competitive event, not just the day of the show or judging.
- Don't live out your own life's dreams or needs through your child's participation. Instead encourage them to set their own goals and contribute to an overall congenial atmosphere.
- Be a positive role model. Enjoy the event and activity in a socially appropriate manner. This includes an absence of alcohol, the use of appropriate language and a cooperative spirit.
- Always stress the development of new skills, abilities and personal goals by offering encouragement and praise.
- Make sure every child has an opportunity to process their feelings and experiences after the competitive activity or event. This can help resolve any sense of failure from participation and emphasize something positive from the experience.
- Positive role models that promote courtesy, respect and consideration to everyone involved in the fair is important.
- Positive expectations and ethical standards encourages and supports appropriate ethical behavior. Adults who turn a blind eye to bending or breaking of the rules or cheating in the name of participation promote that poor sportsmanship and poor ethical behavior is acceptable under the "right" conditions.

Healthy Competition can:

- Teach respect for others. It is important to learn to give credit to the performance of others. Always assume that each person is trying as hard, if not harder, than your child to do the best they can. Respect for others means accepting them and their actions.
 - Teach honesty.
 - Teach cooperation. 4-H competition cannot exist without cooperation. Everyone involved should help each other toward being successful. It reduces the stress, takes pressure off the individual and helps everyone celebrate in winning.
 - Teach how to set and achieve realistic and personal goals.

If everyone takes the time to support the efforts of the youth and 4-H leaders at all 4-H activities, then all participants can anticipate an enjoyable experience.
